Stockholm University migrated from a variety of multiple learning platforms to the enterprise cloud-based itslearning LMS in 2017. Since the implementation, the university has succeeded in integrating core information systems into itslearning and hosting a variety of workshops that encourage teachers to reflect on their course design in both the physical and virtual classroom.

“With itslearning, we have found a partner which can help us in the shift towards an LMS that best meets the university's needs. itslearning and Stockholm University have established a close collaboration in the technical, product, project management and support aspects of the implementation across our faculties and departments.”
